Twelve Angry Men

Reginald Rose wrote Twelve Angry Men as a ninety-minute television drama, one of the famous CBS series Studio One. (Mr. Rose was a colleague on that series of the better-known Paddy Chayevsky, writer of the movies Marty and Network.) Henry Fonda originally starred as Juror Eight.

The action, set in New York in the late 1950's, details the deliberations of a jury in the trial of a nineteen-year-old boy alleged to have murdered his father with a switchblade knife.
